- In 2015 alone 2,333 teens ages 16-19 were killed in motor vehicle crashes in the U.S. This means 6 teens every day were killed in car crashes that year.
- The three main reasons teens crash include being distracted by something inside or outside of the vehicle, going too fast for road conditions and lack of scanning that is needed to detect and react to hazards.
- The most common types of teen crashes involve left hand turns, rear-end events and running off the road.
